

Jacob Zitar

Jacob is a senior from Fountain Hills, Arizona pursuing a degree in Political Science from Arizona State University. Jacob has been interested in politics from a very young age and has pursued that passion as he entered higher education. He enjoys listening to a variety of opinions on highly divisive issues, believing that different opinions create the best solutions for political and social problems. He has previously interned for Martha McSally for U.S. Senate. His hobbies are keeping up on political news, reading books, listening to music, playing with his three dogs, participating in family events, and swimming. He hopes to explore different political fields post-graduation, but among them are aspirations to one day work in the nation's capital.

Neel Raghav Ramesh

Neel Raghav Ramesh is a rising junior studying Economics and Global Politics in Barrett, the Honors College at Arizona State University. He is a student consultant with the New Venture Group in the W. P. Carey School of Business and is a 2018 Tillman Scholar. He enjoys spending his free time playing/watching sports, watching different forms of comedy, and traveling whenever possible. This past semester, Neel was a Senate Page at the Arizona State Senate - introducing him to the state legislative process. Neel intends on going to law school upon graduating from ASU and ultimately wants to shape public policy to provide equal opportunity for all.

Brock Williams

Brock is a junior perusing a degree in Conservation Biology and Ecology with a minor in business, within Barrett the Honors College. He has experience working for the Game and Fish department as a field biologist. He also enjoys attending the theater whenever he has the chance. He plans on attending law school and becoming involved in crafting policy.

Nicole Hinshaw

Nicole (Nikki) Hinshaw is a junior studying Human Communication and Political Science, with certificates in International Studies, Political Entrepreneurship through Internships, and Cross-Sector Leadership. She works as the Communications Coordinator for Project Humanities, an ASU initiative working to elevate civil dialogue around social justice topics. Nikki is also a member of the ASU Next Generation Service Corps. She has completed multiple internships in all sectors; working to address a variety of challenges such as water scarcity and human trafficking. After studying and interning abroad in Ghana, West Africa, Nikki became heavily involved in the international community at ASU. She works as a mentor to international students and participates in the Global Leadership Development Program. Her future career goal is to become a Public Diplomacy Foreign Service Officer, and help bolster the capacity of cultural and public diplomacy programs to better tackle social issues and develop tolerant, global citizens.

Sara Razavi Kelishadi

Sara is a junior at Arizona State University, double majoring in Global Studies and French and hopes to continue her education by pursuing a law degree after receiving her two Bachelors of Arts. Sara can speak three languages: English, French and Farsi. She studied abroad in Lyon, France fall of 2017. She has interned at Granville Law, PLLC for Kerry Granville, a criminal defense lawyer, and has also interned at Welcome to America Project, a non-profit organization that provides refugees with everyday essentials. After her internship at Welcome to America Project came to an end, she continued volunteering with the organization and is now one of the lead volunteers.

Alexandra Kusen

Alexandra Kusen, enrolled in Barrett, The Honors College at Arizona State University, is recognized for deftly managing sophisticated structured finance projects. Highly-focused with an interest in capital raising transactions in private and public U.S. and foreign markets, seeks opportunity where business acumen, computer proficiency, and mathematical, deductive reasoning in spreadsheet development will enhance the profitability of the firm. After interning and spending a year in the industry for experience in trading, operations, and portfolio construction, will earn a degree in law to litigate in the more specialized areas of securities law.

